TAV Construction receives two awards with the Bahrain Airport project

The Bahrain Airport Project by TAV Construction received “Mega Project of the Year 2021” and “Transport Project of the Year 2021” at the 11th edition of MEED Projects Awards held by one of the most reputable publications in the sector, MEED magazine.

TAV Construction, which ranks first in the world in the airport construction sector, was awarded in two categories at the ceremony organized by the Middle East Economic Digest (MEED) for the project involving the new terminal building of Bahrain International Airport and its related works.

TAV Construction General Manager Ümit Kazak stated “Airports are projects that require special expertise, work in harmony with dozens of different systems, have global standards, and have no margin of error. In the past period, we have achieved a significant acceleration in success, especially in the MENA. As TAV Construction, we built the airports of five capital cities of the area and Medina Airport, the second most important city in the Islamic world. We are happy to be awarded in two important categories this year with the airport project, which is one of the most important steps in Bahrain's modernization move.”

TAV Construction won the MEED Transportation Project of the Year awards in 2015, 2016 and 2017 with its Hamad, Medina and Riyadh Airport Projects.
